NLWIC's four core functions:

Community of Practice (Stakeholder Engagement): We engage a network of labour market partners to facilitate idea exchange, identify research opportunities, and share innovative approaches.

Research Projects (Proposal Funding): We provide proposal-based funding for applied research projects that test innovative approaches for better ways to address labour market issues and improve outcomes.

Body of Knowledge (Best Practices): We act as a repository and central access point for innovative employment and training practices and tools, including online access to research and best practices.

Knowledge Mobilization (Capacity Building): We disseminate the body of knowledge to stakeholders via training, information sessions, webinars and other capacity-building activities.

The NL Workforce Innovation Centre (NLWIC), administered by the College of the North Atlantic has a provincial mandate to provide a coordinated, central point of access to engage all labour market stakeholders about challenges, opportunities and best practices in workforce development. The Centre's goal is to promote and support the research, testing and sharing of ideas and models of innovation in workforce development that will positively impact employability, employment, and entrepreneurship within the province's labour force and particularly under-represented groups.
